Lily & Madeleine, Lily & Madeleine

Catalog: AKR118

Release Date: October 29, 2013

Like truth, beauty resides in simplicity. When it manifests itself, it doesn't require elaborate arguments or proofs; you can't debate someone into apprehending it. It's apparent and all it requires is appreciation, or perhaps even love. Such are the songs of Lily & Madeleine.

Understandably, when their debut EP, The Weight of the Globe, came out earlier this year, much was made of the fact that Lily and Madeleine Jurkiewicz are teenagers: Madeleine is eighteen and her sister is sixteen. Surely, that's important given the impressive talent on display. On that release as well as on Lily & Madeleine, their debut album, these two young women sing with a spare elegance that's all the more breathtaking for seeming to come to them so naturally. Both Lily and Madeleine can sing powerfully, but you will find no show-off pyrotechnics here. They are not afraid of fragility or vulnerability.

The songs on Lily & Madeleine trigger profound emotional effects. The shimmering recollections of that summer, that girl, that kiss, the scent of that evening air, the heat of those afternoons, all float in and out of consciousness as these songs play, transporting you to the world inside you that knows everywhere you have been, but that does not know time, or its passage, or its end.

"Their voices can pierce through the chaos of everyday life and actually make you stop what you're doing, if only for a second, and truly listen." -- American Songwriter

"Sister duo Lily and Madeleine almost sound too good to be true—on paper and on our speakers—because they're so young, so stylish, and so talented." -- Teen Vogue

"This isn't the first time we've become enrapt with two sisters harmonizing, but it's a bell we never tire of hearing ring." -- Vogue
