Flying Nun and Capture Tracks reissue of the Able Tasmans' 1986 debut full-length album 'A Cup Of Tea and A Lye Down' with bonus 12" containing the bands first EP 'The Tired Sun' (1985) and three bonus tracks.

Initially, hailing from Whangarei, one of New Zealand's northernmost city, The Able Tasmans where more than 1500km's away from Flying Nun's epicenter Dunedin. However, this never hindered involvement with the label releasing four albums and two EP's filled with their own brand of sweet and crafty guitar pop.

Named after the Dutch explorer Abel Tasman (who first discovered New Zealand in the late 1960's) the band themselves were avid explorers limited only by their imagination. Their song writing and arrangement crossed lines between baroque and indie pop integrating field recordings and bringing keyboards to the forefront of their music. They are also the only New Zealand band to tastefully incorporate bagpipes into a song.

"It was Flying Nun who gave us the chance to record. We remain grateful. I personally felt some pride in hailing from Whangarei, not a major center and certainly not southern, yet doing music that Flying Nun and its grand stable of thoroughbreds thought was something akin to good." founding member Graeme Humphreys explains.

"Even as a dinky 3-piece with not a guitar in sight we were invited to tour alongside Look Blue Go Purple and The Chills. It was a massive vote of confidence."

Now, after nearly two decades their debut album will be available again, with this new collection dedicated to the late David Beniston, the Able Tasmans' original bassist and founding member.
