RELEASE BIO

Half Of Where You Live is the second album by Berlin-based electronic musician Gold Panda. The follow up to his award winning Lucky Shiner released in 2010, his new album is a distillation of that which made his previous work both loved and acclaimed, and also displays an evolution of his sounds, stylings and methods.

Half Of Where You Live is the culmination of three years of touring and intermittent experimentation in his self-built studio, the time between records was well-spent; each track is informed by the experiences of his trips through Asia and beyond. Shows and weeks away forming personal experiences that ultimately became the thematic basis for each track on the album.

Available as a double LP and CD, the record's aesthetic is as finally crafted a piece of art as the music within – created with Ghostly International artistic collaborators Andy Gilmore and Michael Cina.

2013 sees a full worldwide touring itinerary that has already begun with shows in Australia and New Zealand, running through Japan, and then Europe and the US before worldwide festivals this summer.
