

Trouble Snake Eyes

Written and recorded for the highly anticipated return of David Lynch's cult television classic Twin Peaks, "Snake Eyes" effectively harkens a time when noir R&B was the de-facto soundtrack to hard liquor violence. The instrumental trio Trouble includes Lynch's son Riley Lynch on guitar, longtime music supervisor for Lynch, Dean Hurley on drums and Alex Zhang Hungtai (Dirty Beaches, Last Lizard) on tenor saxophone. The B-side to the single consists of the bonus "Mother's Gone," a menacing companion track also recorded during the band's only Twin Peaks recording session. There may never be any more music from Trouble, but this 45 serves as physical evidence of the group's continued existence in a parallel cinematic universe, grinding out late night Roadhouse gigs in the fictitious town of Twin Peaks, Washington.
