BIO

Formed in London in 2011, Ultraísta is a multimedia trio founded on a mutual love of Afrobeat, electronic and dance music, visual art, and tequila. Its members are vocalist/artist Laura Bettinson, and multi-instrumentalist producers Nigel Godrich and Joey Waronker (whose collective resumes read like a guide to groundbreaking and culturally influential modern music). Their eponymous debut album is 10 tracks of highly infectious, exquisitely crafted electronic kraut-pop. Favoring mantras over traditional choruses and distilling their compositions to the barest essentials, they possess the kind of masterful control over the pure anatomy of a pop song that only comes from having played a significant role in redefining the pop song in the 21st century.

We've already said more than they probably wish we had. This album is superb.

"This could be a lost collaboration between Thom Yorke and Stereolab." – SPIN

"The kind of supergroup that you might see surrounded by brownnosers at an opening, and you ask a friend who they are, and they start throwing out artists they've produced like Radiohead, Beck, The Smashing Pumpkins, and Elliott Smith, and then the warm glow surrounding them changes into the tractor beam pull that only the famous and important have." – Chart Attack
